Week 3 Inhuman Bondage Chapter 3 and Fields' Slavery

Therefore, if it is true that money was the main factor behind the genesis of American slavery, then Fields argument that racism is an ideology that arose from slavery makes sense to me. One of Fields most broad claims is that all societies assume that nature has ordained their social arrangements (106).

Ideology and Race in American History by Barbara Fields

logical essence of the notion of race is clear. Ideologies are the eyes through which people see social reality, the form in which they experience it in their own consciousness. The rise of slavery, its growth and dispersal, and its eventual destruction were central events in American history. The various ideologies in which race was embodied became the form in which this central reality found distorted reflection in people's consciousness.
